

Tallitot from Israel at the Judaica Shop

There is a custom to say, MeShe-nichnas Adar, marbim b'simcha.

“When the month of Adar arrives, we increase our joy.”

The month of Adar brings the rejoicing of the holiday of Purim. Adar also brings with it the renewed spring celebrations of bar/bat mitzvahs and weddings. Of course, parents of the bar/bat mitzvah come in to purchase a new tallit for their child, but may not realize that it might make the ceremony extra special to purchase one for themselves as well. The tallit also makes a thoughtful gift for the groom from the bride's parents.

The Judaica Shop has a wonderful selection of tallitot, perfect for these milestone ceremonies. Some of the Israeli companies whose products we have always carried are listed below. Please stop in to see them in resplendent color!

Galilee Silks are produced on Kibbutz Beit Haemek in Northern Israel. Specializing in the hand-dyeing of raw white silk, the artists at Galilee, Israel's only silkworks factory, have created a distinctive line of beautiful, vibrant fashion heirloom-quality tallitot.

Yair Emanuel, a Jerusalem artist who graduated the Bezalel School, uses hand painting technique on pure silk, and hand embroidery and applique to make colorful tallitot. His products capture both the old and new of Jerusalem's special atmosphere.

The Eretz (Land of Israel) Company, established by Efrat Schwartz, a graduate of the Schenkar School of Fashion & Design, creates unique and elegant fashionable tallit sets using the colors and archaeological findings of Israel as inspiration.
